

2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers' Index

Recognising modern slavery influencers

Are you one of the UK's Top100 corporate influencers in the fight to expose and eradicate modern slavery and labour exploitation?

The 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers' Index, developed and delivered by BRE and Sustain Worldwide, recognises individuals who work across all business sectors (not Government or NGOs) who are influence leaders in raising awareness of modern slavery and labour exploitation; those who advocate for robust ethical sourcing and human rights recognition and practices in UK direct business operations and global supply chains. Sectors from whom we anticipate representation include those the GLAA has identified as high risk: Construction, Retail, Apparel, Fashion, Hospitality and Agriculture.

Recognition Dinner

The 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers and their colleagues and stakeholders are invited to attend the black-tie Recognition Dinner on 26 September 2018 in Central London. The Recognition Dinner represents an opportunity to acclaim those influencers whose endeavours have made a difference, and to renew our collective commitment to expose and stop modern slavery and labour exploitation.

We are delighted that Baroness Young of Hornsey OBE will host the Recognition Dinner. The Baroness is a champion of human rights, and has introduced a Bill before Parliament that proposes public authorities are included in requirements under Section 54 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 (transparency in supply chains).

#Top100Index

Recognition

The 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers will be announced on 17 May 2018. On 26 September 2018, at a black-tie Recognition Dinner in Central London, the rankings of the 2018 Top100 Influencers will be revealed, culminating in one person being prestigiously recognised as The 2018 Annual UK Top1 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencer. Each of the Top5 recognised will be invited to give a short speech detailing their influence to date and setting out what they will do next to expose and eradicate modern slavery and labour exploitation in UK direct business operations and global supply chains.

Methodology

The 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers' Index is based on influence on social media and offline in public life. A panel which is independent of business i.e. from Government/NGOs will verify the Index's transparency, robustness and independence. There is no requirement to 'enter' or be nominated for the Index. However, those who are the most active and influential on the issues via social media and in public life will have a greater possibility of being recognised on The 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers' Index.

Media

The 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers' Index is promoted through national and vertical press, and via social media, including LinkedIn and twitter using #Top100Index

Sponsorship

Demonstrate your leadership and position your products and services to reach your target audience before and during the inaugural 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers' Index Recognition Dinner on 26 September.

Modern Slavery and Ethical Labour Leadership Symposium

The 2018 Annual UK Top100 Corporate Modern Slavery Influencers' Index complements the annual Modern Slavery and Ethical Labour Leadership Symposium. The 3rd annual 2018 Symposium, to be held on 27 September 2018 in Central London, draws together the corporate leaders, professional institutions, public and third sector campaigners who are driving the agenda to raise awareness to end modern slavery and labour exploitation in the UK and global supply chains. Visit www.msa4construction.com for more information and to register to attend the 2018 Symposium.
